Healing Strategies

Many of the volunteers in ABIN-PA have used non-medical healing strategies to help in their recovery from brain injury.

These strategies generally stimulate the self-healing capacity of the body, sometimes by enhancing the flow of energy throughout the body.

If you decide to try this path, use just one strategy at a time so that you can tell if it is helping you.

Healing Strategies and Medical Care

Talk to your doctor before trying any healing strategies. Ask if your plans will interfere with your medical treatment. If your physician doesn't object, try one strategy at a time so you can tell what is helpful. Keep your doctor aware of any changes.

These forms of healing do not take the place of medical care. Be sure to get the medical treatment you need. Follow the advice and direction of your physician. Do not change your prescription medication without talking to your physician.

Learn About Alternative Healing Strategies

1. Search the Internet
2. Go to www.abin-pa.org and check out Links, Alternatives
3. Personal recommendations
4. Attend classes or seminars
5. Read books
6. Interview practitioners
7. Ask your physician

Questions to Ask The Practitioner

1. Are there any contraindications?
2. How much is each session?
3. How many sessions are needed to find out if this is helpful?
4. Are there other costs?
5. What is the total amount?
6. Are there papers to sign?
7. Will you be asking me to pay for more than one session at a time?

Questions to Ask Yourself Before Starting

1. Is this OK with my physician?
2. Can I afford it?
3. How long do I want to plan to try this choice?
4. Should I really sign anything?
5. Should I really pay for more than one session at a time?
